A GLOOMY OUTLOOK.

With sixteen exceptions, there are no states in the Union which forbid the marriage of the feeble-minded; and while other states regard such marriages as void, there is no penalty incurred either by the contracting parties or the person who solemnizes the union, and consequently matings among the feeble-minded are of common occurrence. In only fifteen states is there any prohibition upon the marriage of the insane. Only in Indiana and in Washington is there any restriction upon the marriage of confirmed criminals. There are few creatures so degenerate but that most of the states of our enlightened country give them full sanction to perpetuate their impure stock, and the conditions in most European countries in this respect are considerably worse than in the United States. Through ignorance, indifference, false ideas concerning personal liberty, and the absorption of legislators in matters of more immediate political expediency, we are permitting the accumulation of a vicious and defective heredity which would not be tolerated among most primitive peoples.—S. J. Holmes in Atlantic Magazine.

OWNERSHIP OF STANDING TIMBER.

We glean from the Saturday Evening Post the statement that "a great part of the timber land of the United States belongs to 1694 owners, whose combined holdings amount to 105,000,000 acres, an area three-fourths as large as France and more than two and a half times the size of New England." The figures are taken from a report issued by the National Bureau of Corporations and are held by the Post to indicate concentration of wealth.

Unfortunately, the report of the Bureau of Corporations is not before us, but apparently there has been some peculiar classification of timber lands

"Cereal Stories"

"I like the Cereal Stories that appear from time to time in the newspapers"—said a witty woman.

She referred, of course, to the popular breakfast food advertising.

There is more than jest in her statement, for news that bears such an intimate relation to the home and the table is of immense interest.

The Cereal Stories are only one of many interesting features of newspaper advertising.

Indeed, no part of the daily newspaper is of greater personal advantage to the readers than the advertising.

That is why newspaper advertising gives such splendid returns to those who use it.

priced at $45. I told her to go ahead and get it; said I'd borrow the money, but she wouldn't. Instead she bought a shape for a dollar-odd, trimmed it with safety pin and a feather, and saved $44 in one crack.

"Her dress? A particular friend came to see us wearing a Paquin creation. We'll eliminate the harrowing details of how it was made, but refer to the price, which was $150. My wife was actually on her way downtown to be fitted for one, relying on my borrowing ability for the where-withal, when she saw a splendid tail-or-made suit for $11.95, went in and bought it. They can't resist that 2-cent cut any more than they can stand the material cut in the skirt. But she saved $138 there, or $182 on hat and dress—which is going some."

"In this manner, now that you get the idea, she saved the $350."

"And what are you going to do with it now it's saved?"

"Qualify her for the field of finance. We haven't anything to show for the saving, but we have the satisfaction of knowing we are living economically. Besides, she has given me food for reflection."
